

Billionaire inequality

or Re-occupy Wall Street!

Together, the 2,781 billionaires of the world command a net worth of $14,200 billion, equal to the accumulated life earnings of 57 million average laborers of the World ($57 million serf-souls).

By life earnings we don't mean of course the net worth of those 57 million laborers on the day they retire, which is likely to be close to naught, but the total of all salaries accrued along their working lives: After retiring, those 57 million will depend for their subsistence on the current earnings of their working offspring.

We will not have the temerity to assert that there may be some inequality in 2,781 billionaires to command a net worth equal to the life earnings of 57 million laborers.

Rather, the real and outrageous inequality is that a mere 1% of the world's billionaires command more than a fifth of the total billionaires' assets.
