

At long last, vindication over the miscreant

(June 2023)

Whistleblower David Charles Grusch, 36, has recently made in great fanfare some astonishing revelations (Ctrl+Click link to open in new tab): He "has given Congress and the Intelligence Community Inspector General extensive classified information about deeply covert programs that he says possess retrieved intact and partially intact craft of non-human origin",

He also reported "dead pilots of non-human origin".

Assuming Mr. Grusch was not mistaken, one may be tempted to deduce that the pilots were either:

1. Perhaps a species of the gentle and intelligent Houyhnhnms (in so much contrast with the mean and unintelligent human-like creatures known as the Yahoos), in which case the famous Travels into Several Remote Nations of the World was not a work of fiction,

or:

2. A species hailing from some distant extra-terrestrial world, in which case several millennia of agonizing doubt for so many miscreants have finally come to an abrupt end.

If the latter were verified, the revelations would imply at long last the empathic vindication of Creationism and the well-deserved humiliation of Darwinism, since Evolution is by essence divergent and only Supernatural Creation can be convergent, especially in environments separated by several thousands or millions of light-years, and therefore in time referentials differing by several millions or billions of years.

Halleluiah! Praise the Lord!

At long last!

Note: companies such as Virgin Galactic and Elon Musk's SpaceX saw their stock gain sharply, "given the possibility of reverse-engineering the alien technology".

Some clarifications:

A miscreant is originally one who mis-believes (Latin mes-credere), an infidel, a pagan (probably because he was misinformed by some evil master. Should we introduce the word discreant?)

The whistleblower, David Charles Grusch, has articles written about him throughout the established press, including in Europe. He has an elaborate page on Wikipedia.

He was even the talk of the day in Washington, where 'the White House Press Secretary Karine Jean-Pierre said that she "would refer that question to the Department of Defense and let them answer that"'.

Under pressure from Congress, the Department of Defense established in 2020 "the Unidentified Aerial Phenomena Task Force (UAPTF) to investigate encounters with UAPs and assess any potential threats they may pose to national security". UAP is the modern acronym for apparently obsolete UFO.

Congress is taking the thing quite seriously, and is about to investigate the claims.

Talk show host Tucker Carlson had a long tirade about Mr. Grusch's claims on his recent "Tucker on Twitter, Episode 1" of June 6th, among otherwise quite sensible and reasonable topics. The initial show has garnered, as I write, 109 million views. I kid you not.

Since I cannot state with certainty that Mr. Grusch's claims do not reflect reality, all I can do is analyze the consequences of his claims if those were verified, assuming non-human did not refer to the gentle and intelligent Houyhnhnms.

My deduction is that such an occurrence would vindicate the concept of an Almighty Creator, for reason of the divergence of Evolutionary processes, a term which I coined and believe is appropriate, while Creationism would be convergent.

Either:

1. There is such a thing as extraterrestrial life, especially similar and at comparable stages of intellectual development, and a Creator saw it fit to engineer it and then "formed it from the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life", according to Genesis 2:7,

or:

2. There is no Creator and the parallel haphazard but coincidental development of similar forms of life at comparable stages of intellectual development thousands or millions of light-years apart in times separated by millions or billions of years (of which the scientific history of mankind is but the teeniest fraction) cannot but be a figment of science-fiction's wishful but narrow imagination, considering that even in the relatively miniscule confines of our planet there is not a single other species with which we could discuss the most mundane elementary intellectual matter, let alone the secrets of Science and Philosophy.
