

To the attention of the Young Lawyer
(he who is still possessed by the Ideal of Justice)

(September 2026)

Except when closely under the public eye, Justice is but a board game between professional players that excludes all outsiders and the reality of cases, all being in rules and form devised by the players themselves, a game without a referee in which shape substitutes for substance, although at the exclusive expense of the outsider.